

How to Use

The UCSF Double Helix Curriculum is a supplemental practice transformation curriculum consisting of lectures, workshops, and readings that aims to teach residents ways to 1) alleviate daily system pressures and 2) think about system structures and system change.

We know how overwhelming it can be to choose teaching materials that will be most beneficial for your residents. That's why we've created some resources to help guide your decision based on your program's needs and interests.

"I am creating a new practice transformation curriculum and would like to see how other programs structured their new curriculum."

Example Implementations

"I already teach several of these topics, but am looking for new materials or to fill in the gaps."
